

Editor's Note

With the first volume and first issue published in December 2016, Journal of Multidisciplinary Developments (JOMUDE) has taken its active role in the scientific literature. Immediately after that volume – issue, it has been started to be indexed by Google Scholar and PKP Index. It is a pleasure for us to mention that our Editorial Board team and reviewers' database have also improved with many applications came from researchers from different countries. We have also done our ISSN application immediately after publishing first issue (it is required to get an ISSN) and maybe the journal has its ISSN already when you are reading these lines. It should be mentioned that we will keep our hardworking on providing high quality – standards of scientific focus and achieve that with an international team having valuable efforts to make everything better and better in each issue.

In the second volume and first issue of the JOMUDE, we continue to include valuable papers (book reviews, work in progress papers, short research papers, and regular research papers) from both Natural and Social Sciences. Because of the short time between the first and second – current issue, we have decided to publish Volume 2 – Issue 1 as in the status of 'in progress'. If you see that status near to the title of the issue, please keep following it for new papers added. Also, keep following the papers having the status of 'early view of accepted' to get their official page numbers at the final.

As you know, JOMUDE follows the approach of open publishing – access. For more information regarding to submission and details regarding to the whole process till a possible publication, please visit the journal Web site at <http://www.jomude.com> . You can also refer to the information provided previously under front pages.

Enjoy reading this new issue! Thank you very much for your interest in JOMUDE.
